| Educators                | 1. How can you use a deeper understanding of the contributions of the different designations of nursing in your teaching?
                              2. How could your course content be redeveloped to support intra-professional collaboration?
                              3. How might you unintentionally be perpetuating old mental models of nursing and turf protection?
                              4. How can you dismantle siloed education and create learning opportunities that involve the various designations of nursing students? |
| Nurses at point of care   | 1. How do your mental models about the different designations in nursing impact the way you consult and collaborate with other nurses?
                              2. How can you convey respect for the knowledge, skill and judgment of your nursing colleagues?
                              3. What do you need to learn to optimize your scope of practice?
                              4. What are the benefits to patients when nurses work collaboratively? |
| Leaders                  | 1. Have you fully optimized opportunities for all nurses to work to full scope?
                              2. What are the processes that enable nurses to consult one another regarding patient care?
                              3. What are the barriers within your organization (e.g., outdated role descriptions and policies)?
                              4. Are there explicitly stated expectations to practise at optimal scope and engage in consultation and collaboration? |
| Researchers              | 1. To what degree do you include all nursing designations in your studies?
                              2. How can you design your next study to include perspectives of the different designations in nursing?
                              3. How can you contribute new knowledge to support an understanding of the Canadian context and the scope of practice of Canadian nurses? |
